We've heard that Cascadia, the big PNW earthquake is coming, but how prepared are we for when it does come? The last ten years have proven that 72 hours of being prepared is no longer adequate when disasters occur. The most recent recommendations from Oregon Office of Emergency Management (OEM) have changed to communities being at least 2 WEEKS READY.

Whether your personal or organizational mission is centered around emergency preparedness or not, we hope you might consider joining OregonASK in a community conversation to discuss barriers and resources to increase safety within your community child care centers and afterschool programs.

This campaign is about creating awareness, connecting local partners and understanding what communities actually need to be prepared for a man-made or natural disaster.
